Corpus Christi College

Head Chef
Additional Information

The College of Corpus Christi and of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the University of Cambridge (commonly called Corpus Christi College) is the sixth oldest college in the University of Cambridge. Founded in 1352 by the Guilds of Corpus Christi and the Blessed Virgin Mary, it bears the distinction of being the only College in Oxford or Cambridge founded by their citizens. The College has a 650-year commitment to teaching and research, carried out on the site of its original foundation in the heart of mediaeval Cambridge.

Corpus Christi is a leading academic institution, with an excellent record of education, learning and research. With 310 undergraduate and 190 postgraduate students, it is one of the smaller of the Cambridge colleges and prides itself on the friendly nature of its close-knit community. At the same time, its members – both Fellows and students – play an active part in the wider University's intellectual, academic, cultural and sporting life.

The College has around 60 Fellows and 120 staff. It is unusual in having two principal sites: the Old House, its ancient buildings and related hostels in the city centre, and fifteen minutes away, Leckhampton, where most of the postgraduate community is housed, and where the College's playing fields and sports facilities are situated. The College's Parker Library, named after a former Master, Archbishop Matthew Parker, houses a unique collection of historical manuscripts of international significance. It is one of the most significant surviving Renaissance libraries in Europe.

Working directly alongside the Executive Chef, the Head Chef will lead the day-to-day kitchen operation, ensuring exceptional food quality, service standards, and team performance across a diverse catering portfolio. This is a key role focused on maintaining operational excellence, developing the brigade and helping shape the future direction of a prestigious and ambitious culinary operation.
