The Role

We are recruiting to the role of Research Assistant to join Dr Simon Dyall's expanding team. This is an exciting opportunity to be part of a project investigating how dietary intake of omega-3 and omega-6 fatty acids influences brain development of extremely preterm infants. The project is supported by the Waterloo Foundation.

Key responsibilities will include:

- Maintaining accurate records, including participant files, regulatory documentation, and data entry in study databases
- Supporting the development of publications and educational materials based on study findings
- Attending regular team meetings and contributing to project planning and progress reports

The successful candidate will have skills and experience in:

- Clinical or nutrition research, including data collection and dietary assessment methods
- Data management and analysis experience
- Strong organizational and interpersonal skills and excellent attention to detail

If you have any specific questions on the role, please contact Dr Simon Dyall, simon.dyall@roehampton.ac.uk

The University is committed to promoting diversity and equality of opportunity and aims to create a culture and environment where students and staff are treated fairly. The University is an equal opportunities and 'disability confident' employer.
