Employability and Placements

Preparing you for work

Many of our undergraduate degree courses offer a placement year while postgraduates may benefit from our unique Professional Experience pathway.

Placements give you the chance to gain work experience, make industry contacts and increase your employability. And, at ARU, our dedicated Placements Team will support you all the way.

WHY DO A PLACEMENT?

By doing a placement year you can:

- gain first-hand experience in the industry you want to work in
- apply what you've learnt in university to a real job
- develop as a person
- stand out to employers, with a year's experience on your CV and plenty to talk about in job interviews
- get a good understanding of the working environment, helping you adjust to professional life more easily once you graduate

A placement will give you experience of seeking and securing a job and working in an industry relevant to your course. You'll gain invaluable experience, knowledge and contacts, along with skills that you can apply to your final year at university – and in your future career.

Completing a placement improves your chances of securing a graduate role, with employers reporting that they rehired an average of 52% of their interns and 43% of their summer placement students. *

*ISE Annual Student Recruitment Survey 2018

UNDERGRADUATE PLACEMENTS AND INTERNSHIPS

Many of our undergraduate courses offer you the opportunity to take a paid work placement between years two and three of your degree course. During your placement, you'll form lasting professional relationships, gain invaluable industry experience and have the opportunity to apply and enhance your skills.

BUILD YOUR CAREER

Our Employability Service offers events and workshops to help you develop the essential job-related skills that will make you more employable. Visit our our specialist Faculty Employability Advisers for help with your CV, job applications, interview prep and anything else that can help you prepare for the world of work.

POSTGRADUATE PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

Some postgraduate courses offer our Professional Experience pathways including live professional projects, work shadowing or placement.

Professional Experience modules offer a fantastic opportunity to gain industry exposure, and benefit from professional mentoring and feedback, which will help you to secure the graduate role you want. You can choose which Professional Experience modules to take, personalising your learning journey and accessing the most appropriate experiences for you.

Ruskin Modules

Our Ruskin Modules are designed to give you an additional edge in the workplace, helping you build the skills the jobs of the future demand.

As part of your course, you may have the opportunity to choose a Ruskin Module. These exciting opportunities bring together students from different courses to tackle vital challenges.

You'll explore solutions outside your discipline and will have the opportunity to take different perspectives, developing innovative thinking and creative problem-solving skills that employers value. Here are just some of the topics that students on Ruskin Modules have tackled so far:

AI and the future: a threat to humanity?
How can we ensure that the values of AI are aligned with our own? What ethical principles should we programme AI with? How can we ensure that it benefits our lives? And what effects will it have on our lives both in the workplace and at home?

Is there such a thing as a Happy Meal?
Globally, an estimated one billion Happy Meals are sold each year, which means you have probably had one at some point in your life. In this module, we 'unpack' the Happy Meal and explore the questions which come about when we do so.

Climate justice and social inequality: could you be an agent for change?
What does racism have to do with the environment? Will climate change affect us all equally? In this module, you will learn about some of the links between climate changes and inequality, and how we can all become agents for change.

Digital accessibility: why should it matter to you?
We live and work in a digital world – and we produce digital content with moral and legal obligations to ensure that content is accessible. This module asks what it means to exclude differently abled individuals. We look at the contradiction and compromise to balance usability and accessibility, and consider digital skills and brand.

How would you respond in a crisis?
When a serious incident or a crisis occurs, the way in which we react, and work together is essential. Learn from professionals how a large, interdisciplinary investigation is undertaken and reflect upon how your skills would be important in such an investigation.

"From the moment I arrived at ARU, I knew I was embarking on a unique and enriching adventure. The vibrant and inclusive campus community provided a nurturing environment where I could explore, learn, and grow. The programme was challenging in all the right ways with a blend of academic excellence, clinical practice in NHS settings, and personal introspection. The diverse cohort of students and professors I had the privilege of learning alongside was one of the highlights of my experience. Studying abroad has always been my biggest dream and I remember telling so many people about it when they asked me what my future plan was even though the likelihood of studying abroad, for my case, was a bit low due to financial obstacles.

Now I finally made it to the UK thanks to my perseverance and determination, I realized how powerful we all are, turning everything from least likely to reality. I have been and will be making the most out of this opportunity that I earned by myself."

International student support

We're here to help. We can offer you support with your studies and life in the UK. Our award-winning Student Services department is made up of a number of teams which are all here to make your student experience easier.

WELCOME WEEK

This is where it all starts. During Welcome Week we'll give you all the information you need to get started. As well as making new friends, you'll meet your Course Leader and Personal Development Tutor.

You'll get to know your campus, get connected to our IT systems, and find out about all the clubs and societies you can get involved in. You won't be the only one feeling a bit daunted on your first day. If you're an undergraduate student, you'll be matched with a Welcome Buddy, a current ARU student, probably studying your course, who'll be in touch with you before you arrive. Your Welcome Buddy will meet you, either face to face or online, and be on hand during your first trimester to share their experience and tell you about the great clubs, sports and volunteering opportunities you might want to try.

INTERNATIONAL ORIENTATION

Each year the International Office organises an International Orientation Programme to welcome our new international students. The International Orientation Programme helps students moving to the UK make a successful start to their university life.

The orientation covers a range of topics including studying in the UK, the academic system at ARU, working and health entitlements, finding a part-time job, opening a UK bank account, UK culture and customs, and sports and social facilities.

STUDY SKILLS PLUS

We're here for all students with information, advice and guidance on researching, writing, referencing, maths, critical thinking and more study skills. We also offer support to help you manage your time, enabling you to get the most out of your studies.

INTERNATIONAL STUDENT ADVICE

Our International Student Advisors are based in the International Offices at Cambridge and Chelmsford campuses. They're trained to offer you specialist advice on student visas, as well as working and health entitlements in the UK. When you arrive at ARU, you'll receive a handbook full of practical advice on opening a bank account, registering with our health service and organising free English language classes while you study.

FREE ACADEMIC AND LANGUAGE SUPPORT

Throughout the academic year we offer free support to all students. Our drop-in sessions can be tailored to your needs, whether you require help with explaining academic terminology, referencing, giving presentations or language skills like reading, writing, and listening.

PERSONAL TUTORS

All students will be allocated a personal tutor at the start of their course. Your tutor will be your first point of contact for any questions you have about your studies. You'll have regular sessions together in which you can discuss your progress and receive insightful guidance on reaching your full potential as a student.

WORK WHILE YOU STUDY

We have a jobs service team who can help you find paid temporary work or gain work experience to fit around your studies.
